

Join Our Dynamic Team as a Freelance Investigative Journalist

The Namibian is looking for a freelance investigative journalist to deliver fearless, in-depth reporting that makes a difference.

Responsibilities:

- Produce mid- and long-range investigative stories across all The Namibian's platforms.
- Conduct complex, document-based reporting and translate complex topics into compelling and readable stories.
- Build and maintain sensitive source relationships.
- Work with editors and the team to present journalism in innovative ways.
- Ensure accuracy, fairness, and legal compliance in all reporting.
- Collaborate with local and international investigative journalism networks.
- Contribute to related projects, including consultation on stories, photos, infographics, videos, and social media.

Qualifications and Knowledge:

- Bachelor's degree in journalism, political science, law or a related field, or equivalent professional experience
- 3–5 years of reporting experience
- Demonstrated ability to uncover and report on corruption, mismanagement or social justice issues
- Excellent writing, analytical and storytelling skills
- Ability to work independently and collaboratively under tight deadlines
- Strong digital literacy, with advanced research and data analysis skills
- Passion for accountability journalism and a commitment to public interest reporting

Qualified candidates are invited to submit their CV and supporting documents detailing relevant experience to hr@namibian.com.na. Please indicate the position name in the subject line.

The incumbent will report to the Deputy Editor
For enquiries call Tel: +264 61 279 681/657.

Only shortlisted candidates will be contacted.

Closing date: 10 October 2025

Celebrating 40 years of FREE PRESS EXCELLENCE